FOR THE SHABBOS TABLE: SOUL LENDING

GAME CORNER

In this week's parsha, Parshas Mishpatim, we learn all about lending money. When someone lends money to another they are not allowed to charge extra in return for lending. Meaning if you lend someone $10, you can not ask for $12 in return for lending them the money. This may seem like there is no point to lending someone money because there is nothing the lender will get in return. Why should you lend if you will not benefit from it? A: Because that's what Hashem does. Everyday He lends us our neshama - for free! All He expects is to get paid back, meaning that we use our "neshama powers" for Torah and Mitzvos. We need to make sure we are always using our neshama that Hashem is so generous to lend us, to do good things- like being b'simcha and dancing in a tzniusdik way!
